

Keeping Your Will in Check

While it is important to have a will, it is also important to review it on a regular basis. Making changes to your will may not be expensive. With the help of your lawyer, many adjustments can be accomplished through a codicil or via a simple revision.

Please review the following checklist to see if changes need to be made to your will.

- Are there any additions to your family?
- Has your marital status changed?
- Have you had any changes in assets?
- Do you have any health conditions?
- Do you have plans for travel?
- Are you moving to another Province or Country?
- Have you moved from another Province or Country?
- Who are your executors and trustees? Have there been changes since you last reviewed your will?
- What are your charitable interests?